THE MEKONG ELEPHANT PARK SANCTUARY

Pakbeng

The French NGO APEEL is supporting the Mekong Elephant Park project, which aims to preserve and rescue elephants through eco-tourism projects. The sanctuary works to maintain a natural habitat and protect an ecosystem which is essential for the proper diversification of flora. It also offers alternative employment opportunities to mahouts, encourages reproduction initiatives and supports rescue missions of exploited pachyderms.

APOPO

APOPO's demining teams operate in countries, such as Cambodia, that have suffered from the legacy of past conflicts. Their mission is to protect people and the planet through innovative solutions that use trained rats to speed up the detection of landmines. To date, nineteen mine-detecting rats have passed their International Mine Action Standards (IMAS) accreditation in Cambodia and are operating in the clearance process at 4 sites in the country.

KOTO

KOTO is an association that aims to offer vocational training to underprivileged young children and vulnerable young women to get them off the streets. To do this, they are given free training in hotel management and cookery, as well as English lessons for 24 months, followed by work placements in establishments across the capital. The ultimate aim of these apprenticeships is to enable these young people to find a job or even set up their own business.
